one of those notables which men of foreign nations record.
Addison.
Cæsar, whose great sagacity and conduct put his success as much out of the power of chance as human reason could well do, yet upon occasion of a notable experiment, that had like to have lost him his whole army at Dyrrachium, tells us the power of it in his commentaries.
South's Sermon.
It is impossible but a man must have first passed this notable stage, and got his confidence thoroughly debauched and hardened, before he can arrive to the height of sin.
South.
2. Careful; bustling, in contempt and irony.
This absolute monarch was as notable a guardian of the fortunes, as of the lives of his subjects. When any man grew rich, to keep him from being dangerous to the state, he sent for all his goods.

The more to aggravate the note,
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat.
Shakef.
5. Account; information; intelligence.
She that from Naples
Can have no note; unless the sun were post,
The man 'th' moon's too slow.
Shakef. Tempest.
In suits of favour, the first coming ought to take little place; so far forth consideration may be had of his trust, that if intelligence of the matter could not otherwise have been had but by him, advantage be not taken of the note, but the party left to his other means, and in some sort re-compens'd for his discovery.
Bacon, Essay 49.
6. Tune; voice.
These are the notes wherewith are drawn from the hearts of the multitude to many sighs; with these tunes their minds are exasperated against the lawful guides and governors of their souls.
Hooker, b. iv.
The wakeful bird tunes her nocturnal note.
Milton.
I now must change those notes to tragick.
You that can tune your founding strings so well,
Of ladies beauties and of love to tell;
Once change your note, and let your lute report
The justest grief that ever touch'd the court.
Waller.
One common note on either lyre did strike,
And knaves and fools we both abhor'd alike.
Dryden.
7. Single found in music.
From harmony, from heavenly harmony!
This universal frame began:
From harmony to harmony;
Thro' all the compass of the notes it ran,
The diapason closing full in man.
Dryden.
8. State of being observed.
Small matters come with great commendation, because they are continually in use and in note; whereas the occasion of any great virtue cometh but on festivals.
Bacon.
9. Short hint; small paper.
He will'd me
In heedfull't reservation to bestow them,
As notes whose faculties inclusive were,
More than they were in note.
Shakespeare.
In the body's prison so the lies,
As through the body's windows she must look,
Her divers pow'rs of sense to exercise,
By gathering notes out of the world's great book.

11. A small letter.
A hollow cane within her hand he brought,
But in the concave had inclos'd a note.
Dryden.
I cannot get over the prejudice of taking some little offence at the clergy, for perpetually reading their sermons;
perhaps my frequent hearing of foreigners, who never make use of notes, may have added to my disgust.
Swift.
12. A paper given in confession of a debt.
His note will go farther than my bond.
John Bull.
13. Explanatory annotation.
The best writers have been perplexed with notes, and obscured with illustrations.
Felton on the Classics.
NOTEBOOK. n. f. [note and book.] A book in which notes and memorandums are set down.
Cælius all his faults observ'd;
